COMMENT OF
THE DAY

Radio Hongkong

YESTERDAY'S debate on the future of Radio Hongkong, run more or less according to expectations; likewise Government's willing acceptance of the Unofficials' amendments to the recommendations made in the White Paper.

Summarised, the Colony can expect sometime in the future: a more powerful transmitter; longer hours of broadcasting and more varied programmes on the Chinese section; a more flexible method of financing the station's operating costs; the appearance of a privately-run commercial broadcasting station.

These are improvements which will meet with fairly general approval. Nevertheless, injected into the Unofficials' amendments yesterday was a condition which creates immediate misgivings. It was that any Government subsidy needed to cover the difference between Radio Hongkong's revenue and expenditure should be spent on programmes that are cultural, educational and informative.

Listeners to Radio Hongkong, whether Chinese or non-Chinese, will want to know why. The White Paper freely admitted, and in so doing confirmed existing public opinion, that Radio Hongkong needed to improve its programmes, notably those channelled through ZEK. And by improvement, the listeners mean programmes with a more widely popular appeal.

Most listeners will take issue with the proposition that Radio Hongkong's prime functions are to educate and inform. It is a radio station and essentially exists to entertain; to give listeners, as far as possible, what they desire. And there isn't a radio station in the world that has found cultural, educational and informative programmes to attract the attention of more than three per cent of its listeners.

We believe heavy superimposition of this type of "entertainment" on existing programmes from Radio Hongkong's two transmissions would be disastrous. The costly existence of the station is, in the final analysis, justified only by the number of listeners it can regularly attract to its programmes. Once lose a listener because of unappealing programmes, then, as any radio station manager will confirm, it is extremely difficult to recapture his attention.

Some of the Unofficials appeared to envisage a situation in the future where a commercial broadcasting station would serve all local listeners in the field of popular radio entertainment, leaving Radio Hongkong to concentrate on cultural, educational and informative subjects.

If such a development ever transpired, Radio Hongkong might just as well close down. It would attract at the most three per cent of the listening public, and from the financial point of view there would be no further justification for its existence.

If (and it is probably quite a big if) a commercial station becomes operative in the Colony, Radio Hongkong must treat it as a competitor. It cannot afford to lose listeners because its programmes do not measure up to popular demands.

Very truly the Colonial Secretary pointed out yesterday that a radio station's programmes must be balanced, and one of the most difficult tasks is to maintain that balance with cultural and educational broadcasts.

There is room for the judicious inclusion of programmes such as the Unofficials suggest, but it would be wise to regard them as the raison d'être of Radio Hongkong, and we trust in the allocation of subsidies for the station, Government will not allow itself to be held rigidly by that part of yesterday's amendments.

IKE'S BIG URANIUM OFFER

$1,000 Million For Peaceful Atomic Development HALF FOR USE OUTSIDE U.S.

Washington, Feb. 22.

President Eisenhower today ordered the release of $1,000 million worth of uranium 235, half for use in the United States and half overseas for the development of atomic energy for peaceful purposes.

It will be either sold or leased.

Uranium 235 is a fissionable material used as fuel in an atomic reactor. Forty thousand kilograms will be released under the President's announcement.

In a statement issued at his holiday headquarters at Thomasville, Georgia, the President said: "This action demonstrates the confidence of the United States in the possibilities of developing nuclear power for civilian uses. It is an earnest of our faith that the atom can be made a powerful instrument for the promotion of world peace."

Mr. Eisenhower said it was not intended that nations at present producing uranium 235 or the Soviet Union and its satellites should share in the distribution abroad.

He said 20,000 kilograms would be distributed outside the United States. Mr. Eisenhower said the 40,000 kilograms (about 88,000 pounds weight) would be made available "over a period of years" either for sale or lease under conditions prescribed by the United States Government.

In America, 20,000 kilograms would be made available through lease for all licensed civilian purposes.

The conference follows unanimous approval by the United Nations General Assembly last December 3 of moves to set up an international agency on the peaceful uses of atomic energy.

The task of the conference, which has been twice postponed since December, will be to examine a draft statute for the proposed agency.

PRELUDE TO MEETING

President Eisenhower said the release of uranium 235 was in addition to the 200 kilograms already made available.

The distribution, he said, would be subject to "prudent safeguards against diversion of the materials to non-peaceful purposes."

President Eisenhower's announcement comes five days before a 12-nation conference is due to open in Washington on his "Atoms for Peace" plan.

Mr. James Hagerly, the White House Press Secretary, said much had been released in the past but he did not know how much.

Admiral Lewis Strauss, Chairman of the Atomic Energy Commission, issued an accompanying statement describing the President's action as "the most important step towards peaceful uses of atomic energy since the passage of the Atomic Energy Act of 1946."

OFFICIALS ASTOUNDED

Observers in Washington were astounded today by the size of President Eisenhower's donation.

One official said: "This will give the boys in the Kremlin something to think about. The Russians can't possibly hope to match this."

Senator Henry Jackson said it would "unequivocally demonstrate to doubting Thomases abroad that we are staunch advocates of the peaceful atom."

Senator Jackson, a member of the Joint Congressional Committee, said the uranium would "help pump water to irrigate arid regions" and "do much to dispel the vicious propaganda that has associated us exclusively with the military atom."

Senator Clinton Anderson, Chairman of the Joint Congressional Atomic Energy Committee, hailed the President's move as a "valuable step in the right direction."

Senator Anderson said: "As long as there is a guarantee that this U-235 used abroad will not be diverted to other than peaceful uses, this programme can only be beneficial to the United States and to the development of the atom as a peaceful unit in our society."—United Press.

Young Doctor Stabbed By Chinese Patient

Chicago, Feb. 22. An aged Chinese, who cried "You cut me once, now I cut you," stabbed a young doctor to death today in Cook County Hospital.

The victim was Dr. Bruno Epstein, 25, a native of Vienna, Austria, who had been at the hospital since last July.

The Chinese was Jim Go, a 70-year-old dishwasher, who was a patient in the hospital from January 9 to February 9. Police said Go returned to the hospital today for a check-up and approached Dr. Epstein as he passed through a corridor with three other doctors and a male nurse.

COLONIES TO MAKE OWN DECISION ON HANGING?

London, Feb. 22. Mr. John Hare, Minister of State for Colonial Affairs, said today the Government would keep the colonial governments informed of any decision it took about abolishing the death penalty.

Mr. Stephen Swinger, a Labour member, had referred to the House of Commons decision to abolish or suspend hanging and asked what would be done in the colonies.

Mr. Hare replied: "Local law and practice are the responsibility of the colonial governments. The Colonial Secretary will of course keep these governments informed of any decisions which Her Majesty's Government may take in this matter."—Reuter.

HOW SHIRLEY LOST DONALD (HER OUT OF THIS WORLD BOY FRIEND)

London, Feb. 22. A flesh and blood spiritualist wooed a pretty cockney girl away from a boy friend who was out of this world tonight. Spiritualist Harry Hanks claimed after a one-hour seance attended by reporters and angry policemen that he had drawn 15-year-old Shirley Hitchens from her sweetheart, Donald, a ghost.

Shirley, a 15-year-old London salesgirl, told a television audience recently that the ghost named Donald made love to her by rapping on her bedroom wall.

She said she wrote the alphabet on a card and asked Donald to tap at the right letters. This way, she said, she learned that Donald was a

SUDAN DISASTER

194 Die In Prison Barracks

Cairo, Feb. 22.

A Sudanese Police official said tonight that 194 farm workers arrested after a violent week-end clash with Police had died in the Army barracks where they were being detained, the Arab news agency reported from Khartoum.

Others were in a serious condition.

A Sudanese Government statement later announced with deep regret that the workers, held for interrogation after the clash, had been found dead today.

It was believed they had died from asphyxia resulting from heat and overcrowding.

REPORT TO CABINET

The statement said medical authorities were making an investigation and a report would be made to the cabinet, after which the Government would publish a full report.

The statement appealed to the public to await official information.

Dr. Amin el Sayed, the Sudanese Health Minister, flew to Khartoum with doctors and senior officials to investigate the mass deaths.

He was accompanied by the Sudan Police commander, Amin Ahmed Hussein.

The Deputy Police commander was quoted by the agency as saying the dead were among 285 arrested farmers moved to Kosti Barracks, yesterday and put in one room. Eight other workers were in a serious condition.

He said he did not know the cause of the mass deaths but ruled out asphyxia, as the barracks ventilation was good according to the agency. He said the workers' deaths might have been due to poisoned food eaten before their arrest.

A total of 638 workers were detained after the clash last Sunday in which 20 workers, two policemen and a village guard were reported killed.

The clash was said to have occurred after workers of the Gouda scheme, owned by a Sudanese company, refused to deliver the season's cotton crop to the company.

Police intervened and tried to disperse the workers, and were armed with spears and sticks, the agency said.—Reuter.

Girl Meets Boy (Alone) For The First Time And She Is 24!

London, Feb. 22.

Pretty 24-year-old Kathleen Rutty talked to a man alone for the first time in her life last night. She also had her first date and her first glass of champagne.

Kathleen had been a ward of the Government since she was three years old. Under the terms of a legal order, she was even forbidden to speak to a "male person" alone.

But the Chief Justice Lord Goddard yesterday struck off the legal bonds and Kathleen lost little time in enjoying her new-found "freedom."

Last night she walked arm-in-arm with Joseph Beckwith, 22, a friend of her step-brother. Later, they toasted for release over a glass of champagne, and they talked.

Lord Goddard's order climaxed a long fight for Kathleen's freedom, waged with the assistance of the National Council for Civil Liberties.

Put In Poor House

Kathleen was taken from her mother and placed in a poor house at the age of three months. She was later assigned to live with relatives but under the strict supervision of the Royal Eastern Counties Institution of Colchester.

She was held under a ruling in the Mental Deficiency Act which gives local authorities the right to decide where she lived, what she did and whom she could see.

But her counsel, Mr. John Platt Mills, said Kathleen could spell and do arithmetic just as well as the doctors who judged her and found her lacking.

Kathleen is employed in a factory. She lives with her former "supervisors," her half-brother and his wife.—United Press.

MP's Question On Mui-tsai

London, Feb. 22.

Mr. Reginald Sorensen, (Labour) asked in the House of Commons today how many cases of Mui-tsai bondage of children now existed in Hongkong and what action had been taken to secure the progressive abolition of this institution.

Mr. John Hare, Minister of State for Colonial Affairs, replied: "No cases have come to light for a number of years."

He said Mui-tsai was illegal in Hongkong.—Reuter.

Peron Men Blamed For Huge Explosion

Buenos Aires, Feb. 22.

An Army arsenal blew up today in the suburb of Miguelete, rocking the entire city with the force of an earthquake and shaking more than 2,000,000 residents in their beds.

Major Louis Gazzoli, who was in charge of the arsenal, said he was positive the blast was the work of Peronist saboteurs. The explosion opened a crater 30 feet across and 30 feet deep. It showered a vast area with unexploded bombs and artillery shells but beyond some minor injuries nobody was hurt.

One policeman and one cyclist found near the scene were arrested.

FUSES REMOVED

Major Gazzoli said a holocaust was averted due to the precaution of removing fuses when storing shells, bombs and mortar missiles so that they fell harmlessly up to 750 feet away from the arsenal.

While many revolutionary government officials shared Major Gazzoli's conviction that the blast was the work of Peronist saboteurs, the Army was also investigating the possibility of spontaneous combustion setting off the arsenal.—United Press.

Paratroopers To Battle With Rebels

Rio de Janeiro, Feb. 22.

Two hundred Government paratroopers flew to the mouth of the Amazon today for operations against Brazilian Air Force rebels who have revolted.

The rebels were today reported to have taken over airfields at Guiancuru and Fordlandia, giving them a total of seven bases for operations in the Amazon valley.

So far there has been no violence or bloodshed in the revolt, apparently because of Government reluctance to use force against the rebels, but Brazilians are wondering whether the revolt will blow over or touch off a major explosion.

The rebel declaration of a revolt is related to use of troops last November when the "strong man" War Minister, General Henrique Teixeira Lott, led two military coups which resulted in three men occupying the Presidential chair within three days.

The November coups were aimed at preventing disruption of the installation last month of the elected president, Senator Juscelino Kubitschek.—Reuter.

Protestants Dispute BBC Claim

London, Feb. 22.

The Protestant Alliance today protested to the BBC for "disseminating the Roman Catholic propaganda" that St. Peter was the first pope.

The Protestant Alliance, in their statement, called on the BBC to apologise and withdraw a radio quiz programme statement that St. Peter was the first pope.

It said the BBC was "knowingly or unknowingly using its organisation for Roman Catholic propaganda."—Reuter.

New Bid To Break The Bank

Nice, Feb. 22.

The Police announced they found 85 pairs of loaded dice in the luggage of one of three men bearing American passports, picked up here today on a charge of trying to cheat the Monte Carlo Casino.

The men were arrested after having allegedly used a pair of loaded dice, marked "Monte Carlo," to win some 3,000,000 francs ($5,800) at the dice tables of the Monte Carlo Casino.—France Press.

'IKE RUNNING AGAIN' REPORT IS DENIED

Washington, Feb. 22.

A White House spokesman today denied that Mr. Sherman Adams, assistant to President Eisenhower, had "passed the word" that the chief executive would run for re-election.

The Press Secretary, Mr. James Hagerly, was asked about a report that Mr. Adams and Mr. Leonard Hall, the Republican National Chairman, had informed top Republican leaders that Mr. Eisenhower was willing to stand for re-election.

The Detroit News, in a dispatch by Martin Hayden from Washington, said there were "no ifs or ands or buts about it."

Mr. Hagerly said he checked the story by telephone with Mr. Adams in Washington and "Adams said he had never made any such statement." Mr. Hagerly said he did not check with Mr. Hall.

Asked if a second-term decision of any sort had been relayed by the President to "anybody," Mr. Hagerly replied: "Not to my knowledge."—United Press.

US SENATE INVESTIGATING BURGESS & MACLEAN

By Paul Scott Rankin

Washington, Feb. 22.

The Senate Internal Security Committee has now received a lengthy memorandum from the State Department on the past and present activities of the fugitive British diplomats Donald Maclean and Guy Burgess, who appeared in Moscow two weeks ago.

Members of the committee staff told Reuter that the memorandum signed by the Assistant Secretary of State for Congressional Relations, Mr. Thurston Morton, was being studied to determine whether the diplomats, who had served in the British Embassy in Washington at various times between 1944 and 1951, were in a position to betray any United States government secrets to the Soviet Union and Communists.

Johannesburg, Feb. 22.
A pretty 23-year-old Johannesburg girl is to marry as a result of a coincidence.
The marriage proposal came from a farmer in Canada, with whom she corresponded through the pen-pal club which she joined to ease her loneliness.
Her reply said she wanted to accept, but feared marriage would be impossible as she was deaf and dumb.
Back came a letter, saying: "Do not worry. So am I." — China Mail Special.

He has pedalled some 9,000 miles and expects to cover about the same distance through Uruguay and Brazil and round the northern hump of South America to get back to Columbia by next Christmas. — China Mail Special.

BONN GIVES NEW ARMY A NAME

Bonn, Feb. 22.

The West German Defence Committee today completed discussions on a bill laying the legal foundations for a 500,000-strong West German army.

By 18 votes to eight the committee decided to name the new army "Bundeswehr" (Federal armed forces).

It is expected that an attempt will be made in the full Lower House next month before the choice of "Wehrmacht"—the title used under the Nazis—introduced in place of "Bundeswehr."

Juvenile Delinquency In Russia

Moscow, Feb. 22.

Soviet youth leader, Alexander Chepeline, attacked juvenile delinquency and the high cost of children's toys in a speech made today to the Soviet Communist Party Congress here. Chepeline, who is Secretary of the Communist Youth League, said some Soviet youths were addicted to "laziness, amorality, drink and hooliganism."

Chepeline said the league had taken steps to remedy the situation but he said other measures besides re-education must be taken against "these rascals."

The youth leader complained that Soviet children's toys are too costly, and of poor quality. He said Soviet stores are cluttered with ducks, swans and geese but that it is not possible to find an ordinary celluloid doll. Chepeline said: "A plastic rooster cost more than three live baby chicks." — France-Press.

2 Important Hurdles

The bill is due for its second and third readings in the Lower House next month before it goes to the Upper House for final approval.

It will replace the temporary "Volunteers Law", which expires on March 31 and empowers the government to raise only 6,000 troops.

Dr Adenauer faces two important hurdles before the bill reaches the Bundestag. One is the insistence of the Free Democrats on coupling a bill for the 1957 elections with the soldier's bill.

Amateur archers, who find themselves at a disadvantage compared with huntmen armed with guns, are seeking a game preserve of their own.

Marshal Zhukov

Zhukov Calls For Russian Vigilance

Moscow, Feb. 23. Marshal Georgi Zhukov, Soviet Defence Minister, marked today's 38th anniversary of the founding of the Soviet army and navy by calling tonight for strengthening of the country's defence potential.

In an Order of the Day published by the Soviet news agency, Tass, he said members of the armed forces were strict in discipline and were raising by all means their vigilance and preparedness for battle.

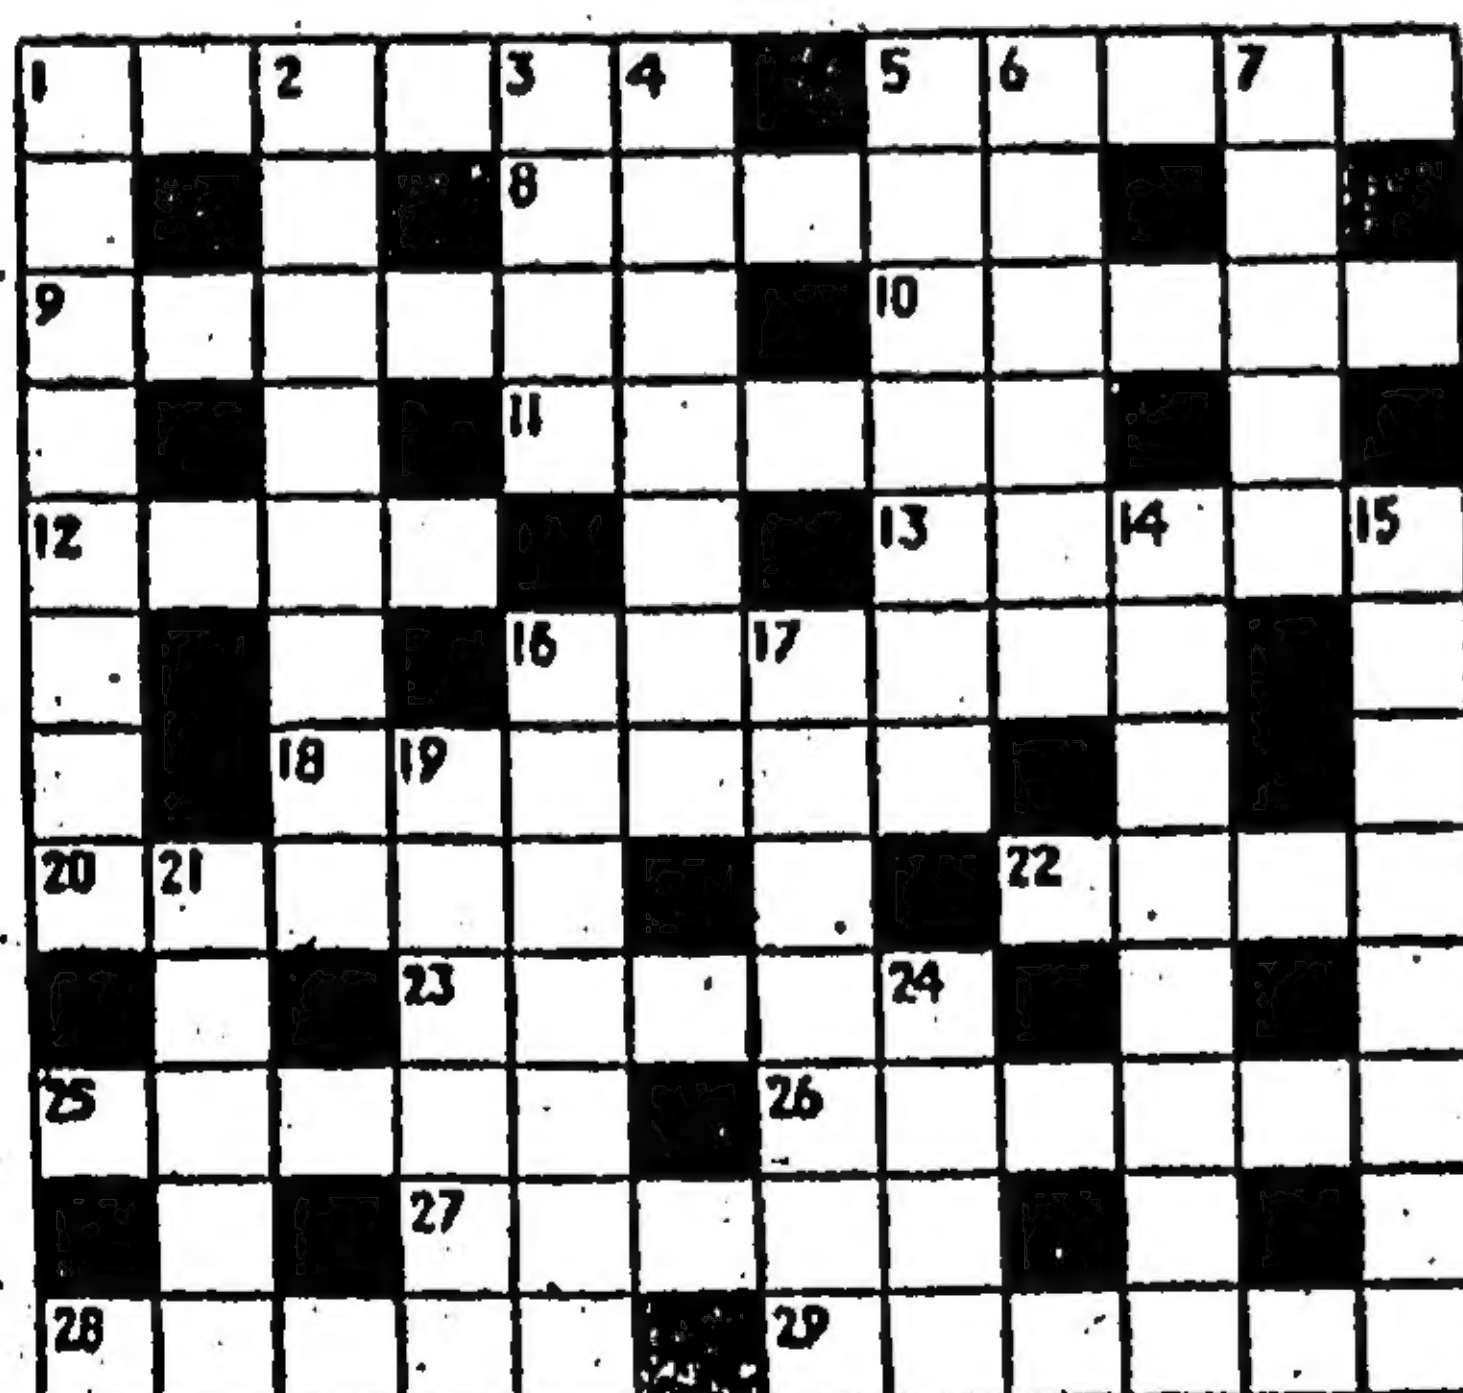

"They must take new steps forward to perfect their military skill and acquire knowledge of their modern battle equipment and weapons," Marshal Zhukov said.

He said the Soviet government had carried out a number of measures aimed at easing international tension but "aggressive quarters in the imperialist countries do not want to reckon with the will and interests of the peoples,"—Reuters.

INCREASED DEFENCE BUDGETS MAY BE NEEDED

Washington, Feb. 22.

Members of the North Atlantic Treaty Organisation (NATO) have been informed that it probably will cost them more money if they bring their defences up to date with the latest United States weapons, US officials said today.

The reorganisation and armament required by the alliance to meet the need of modern warfare is currently being discussed by high military and diplomatic officials in Paris.

Only last month, President Eisenhower in his budget message revealed that the United States was ready to put the NATO allies on an equal non-atomic fire-power basis with its own forces.

For the first time the Allies will receive the latest heavy artillery weapons and guided missiles which in case of emergency could easily be equipped at some future time with atomic warheads.

Call For Increase

Present exchange of nuclear weapons, however, is banned by legislation.

Officials told the United Press that the acquisition of new weapons is likely to call for an increase in the defence budgets of many of the NATO countries. Officials of some of the smaller members of NATO had hoped that with such modern weapons as the powerful "Nike", a vertical take-off missile, the "Honest John" and other guided shells, NATO's ground forces might be reduced. Through this they hoped also to cut some of their military budgets.

The opinion now is that due to their high cost the modern missiles will require even greater military expenditures from the Allies than before.

United States officials also believe that with some countries having cut conscription to 18 months, NATO's ground forces have been reduced as much as possible without actually endangering the safety of the alliance.

The current Paris talks, according to official sources, are chiefly aimed at informing all NATO members of the latest military tactics worked out by Britain, France and the United States in the light of the development of atomic warfare.

Other Equipment

They will also be told about some of the new equipment the United States plans to ship to Europe besides guided missiles. This is known to include highly complicated electronic equipment that will set up a wide radar network for the detection of aggressive forces. The decisions reached by NATO's military leaders in Paris will be submitted to the foreign ministers of the member nations for final approval.—United Press.

Dawn Addams To Star With Chaplin

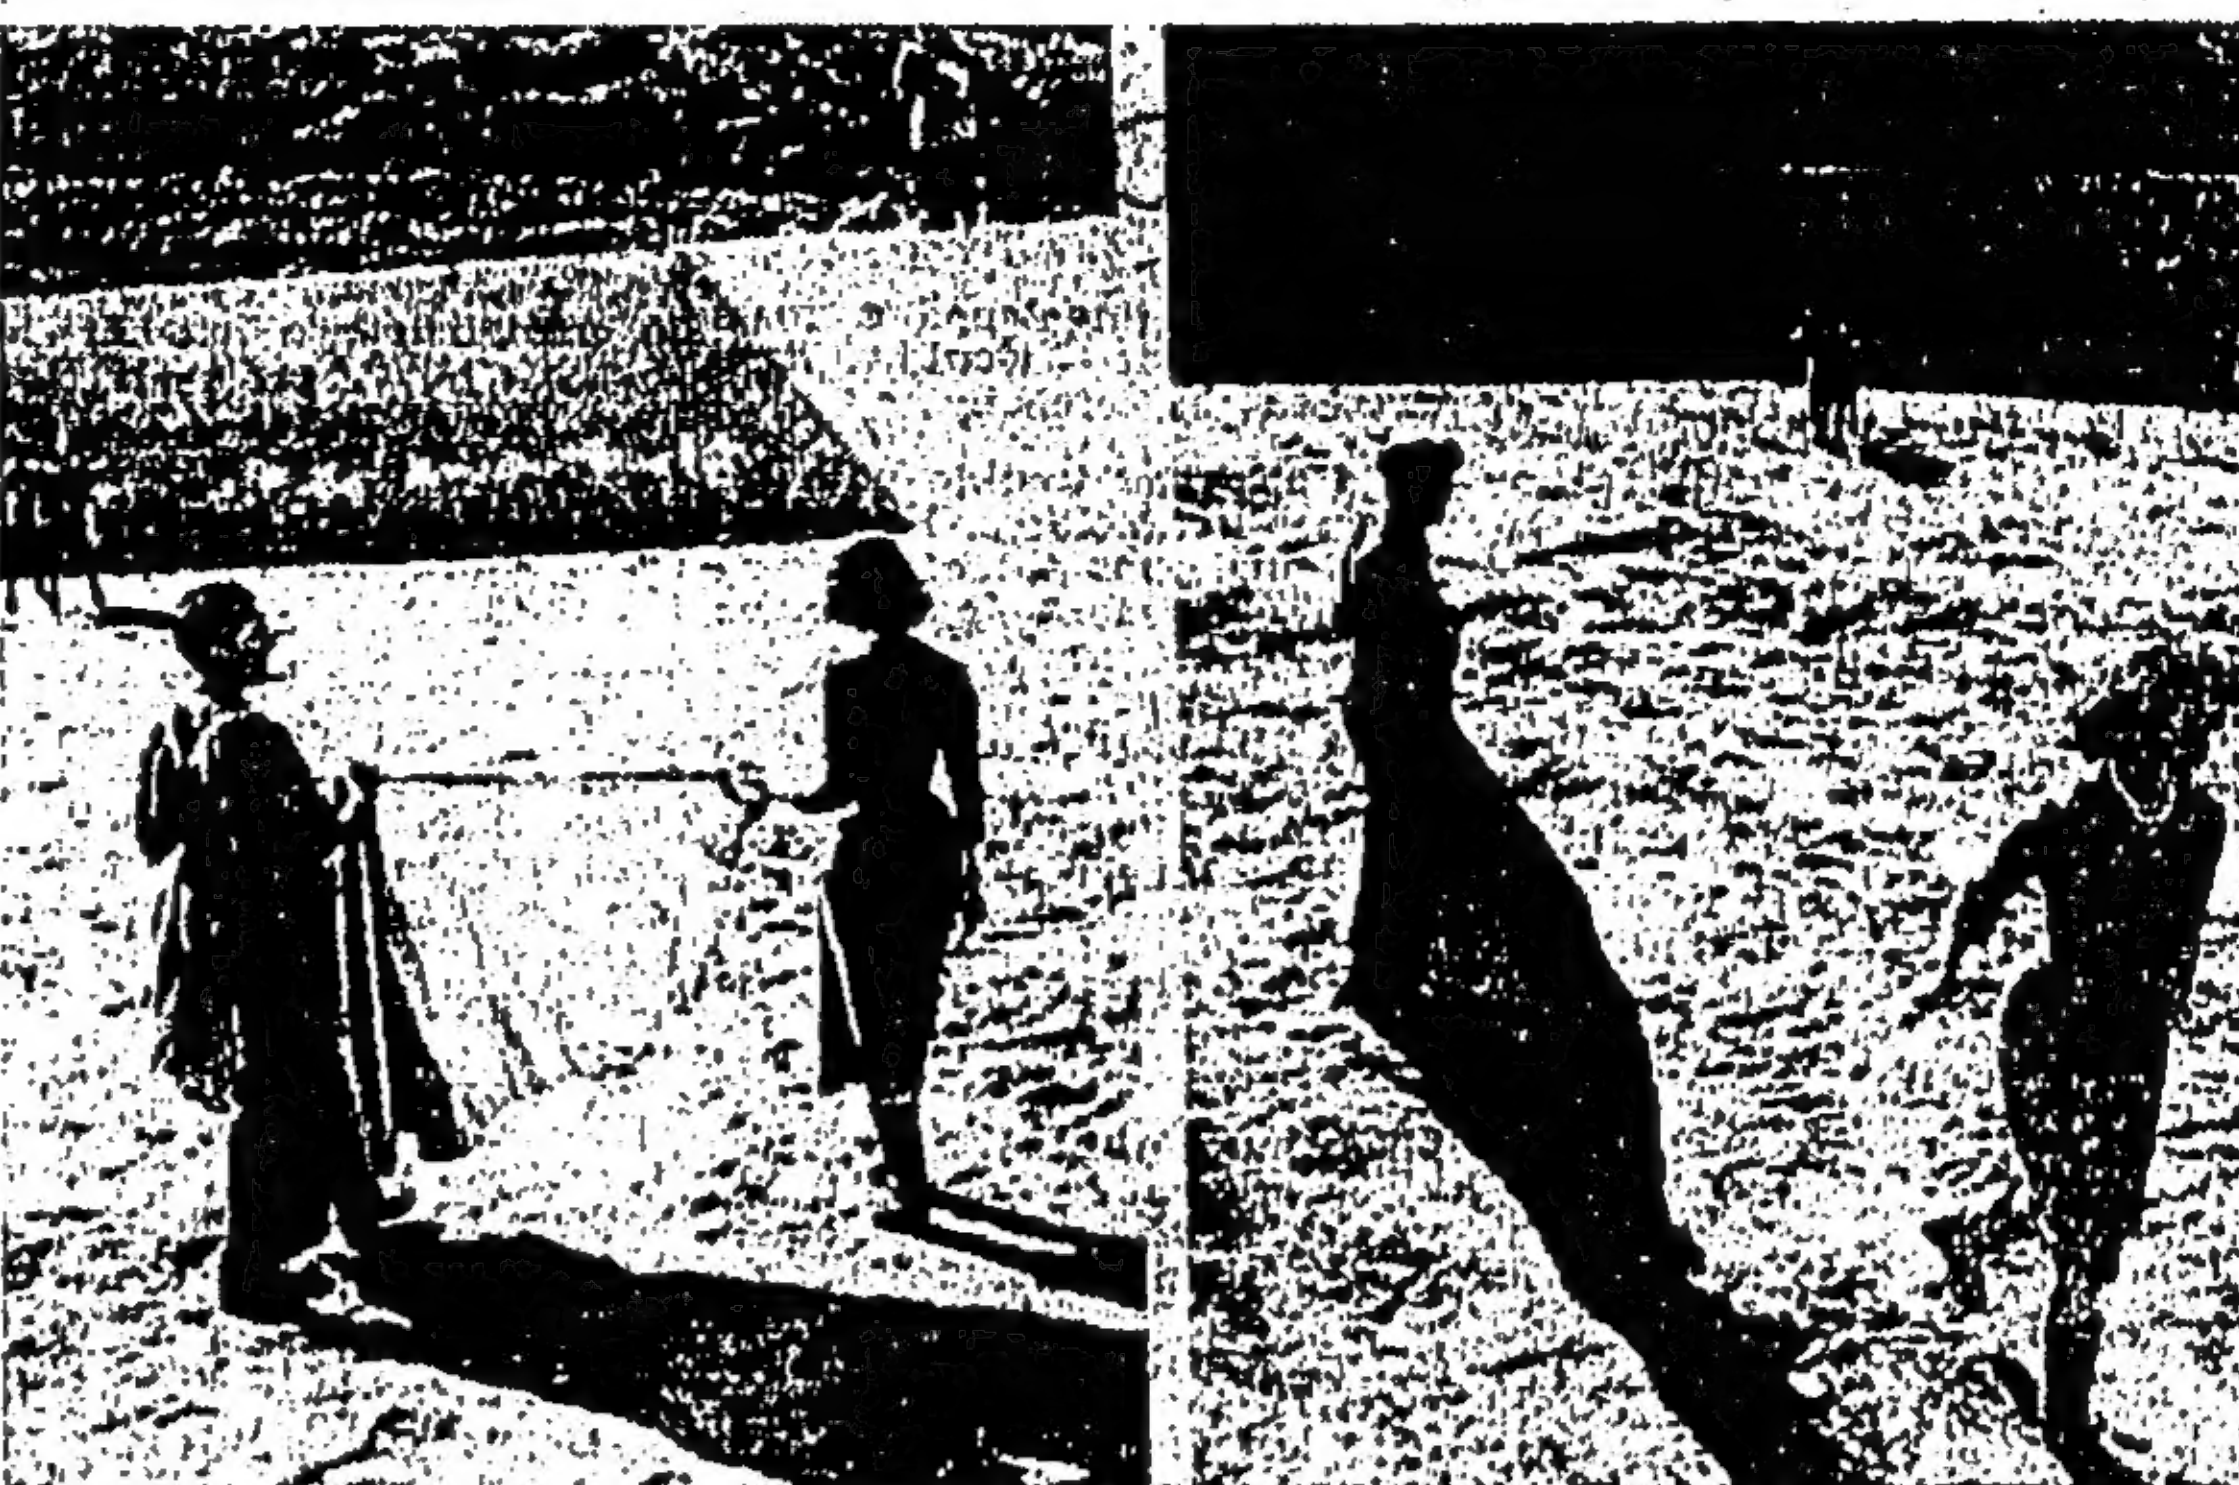

Rome, Feb. 22. Dawn Addams, British film star wife of Italian Prince Vittorio Maestri, will star opposite Charlie Chaplin in his next film, "The King in New York," which he plans to start at the end of April, it was announced here tonight. Chaplin himself, who flew to London tonight from his Swiss home at Vevey, will announce in which country he plans to shoot the film. Despite its title, the film is unlikely to be shot in the United States. "I hardly think that New York will be the location," Miss Addams commented to-night when asked her opinion. Miss Addams told reporters here that Chaplin, whom she first met in California some years ago, telephoned her recently from Switzerland and asked her if she would take the lead opposite him. He wrote the script and is directing the film himself. Miss Addams spent three days with the Chaplin family at Vevey, where she read the script and at once accepted the role. Miss Addams, 25, has made 16 films.—China Mail Special.

'Encourage Free Asians To Attack Communists'

New York, Feb. 22.

Senator Joseph McCarthy demanded tonight that the United States "encourage" free Asians to attack the Communists in China, Korea and Vietnam.

Senator McCarthy and Senator William Jenner assailed administration foreign policy in speeches prepared for a Washington's Birthday rally of the "For America" conservative organisation at Carnegie Hall.

Senator McCarthy said US policy must seek to wipe communism from the earth. Its short-term aim, he said, "must be to encourage free people—especially those in Asia with armed forces at their disposal—to attempt to liberate their Communist-held homelands. "The free Chinese are willing and able to start liberating their homelands by guerrilla action and raids against the Chinese mainland," he said. "The South Koreans are willing and eager to attempt to liberate North Korea. The South Vietnamese are willing and eager to attempt to liberate North Vietnam."

No Guarantee

"There is no guarantee that Asian wars of liberation will succeed," said Senator McCarthy. "But the United States cannot afford to miss what may be our last opportunity to defeat communism without the commitment of American armed forces."

Senator McCarthy praised General Douglas MacArthur and described him as a follow "Right Wing Republican" and an "Asia-firer."

He charged: "From Roosevelt, through Truman to Eisenhower, we have taught the Asian people how to appease communism, how to sell out to communism—how to surrender to communism."

World Government

Senator McCarthy urged his audience to put pressure on the government to end foreign aid to countries which ship strategic goods to the Communists. Senator Jenner attacked the United Nations and the North Atlantic Treaty Organisation as steps toward world government, and said: "A few people in our government... planned it that way."

He urged the election of an "America First" Congress.

International Fraud Gets Five Years

Hamburg, Feb. 22. HEINZ Becker, 35-year-old secretary of an import-export firm, was sent to prison for five years today for international frauds involving 10 million marks (about £330,000).

The charges against him of fraud, forgery, currency and bankruptcy offences and breach of faith concerned mostly his activities as secretary of the European and Overseas Trading Company when he concluded deals with firms in Tokyo, New York, Paris, Amsterdam, Casablanca, and Rio de Janeiro, among other places.

Harmed Reputation

The prosecutor said Becker had stated under questioning that the firm had chosen an English name to help it start international trading in 1949. A German name at that time, he said, would have been only a hindrance. The court said that Becker's jobbing operations had severely harmed the reputation abroad of Hamburg traders. It said the firm had been bankrupt since 1949, when it lost a million marks (about £330,000) on an American egg deal. The firm had had only a 48,000 marks (about £1,500) capital. The 18 months that Becker has been under arrest, will be deducted from his prison sentence.—China Mail Special.

The Longer Kilt, D'ye Ken

By J. W. TAYLOR

THERE'S high jinks going up in Scotland over the suggestion of the Scottish Official Board of Highland Dancing to lengthen the kilt. They say that the long skirt of the Aboyne dress for women is not so suitable for dancing compared with the long kilt recommended by the Board.

Chief critic of the Aboyne dress is Mr. H. Fairley, of Edinburgh, chairman of the Board, who told a press conference that the proposed dress of Highland dancing, which eliminates all unorthodox variations, had been devised by the Board and was soon to be published in a textbook.

As for the women dancers' dress, Mr. Fairley said the Board suggested a kilt, slightly longer than that worn by men, and two choices of doublets. He considered that the proposed dress would give judges every opportunity of seeing the dancers' foot and leg action.

As to the possibility of conflict with the dress suggested three years ago by the organizers of the Aboyne Games, he thought there would be some discussion in the two styles, but maintained that the long skirt of the Aboyne dress was not so suitable for dancing.

ADD POUNDS

ALL this has been strongly challenged by Colonel W. Libburn of Coull, Captain of the Aboyne Games. He boldly declares: "It is entirely wrong that women should wear the kilt, for the kilt is man's dress. Although we regret that other people do not follow the Aboyne dress we have prescribed, we have no intention of forcing our views on anyone. But we do find that our dress is pleasing to almost everyone and especially to the dancers, who find it extremely light and very much cheaper. It works out at quarter the price of this long kilt business."

The Colonel adds: "All our judges have assured us that the Aboyne dress is eminently suitable from the point of view of judging. A competent judge has no difficulty in judging the footwork of girls dressed in Aboyne dress."

He finally claims that the Board's proposal to lengthen the kilt was going to add pounds in weight to the garment which, at the end of the day, would still be of the same length as the Aboyne skirt, which also reached below the knee.

Feminine champion of the war to be waged against the Board's decision is Mrs. Jenny Buchanan, mother and manager of Cathiona, holder of the Highland dancing world title. She says: "The excuse that the knee-length kilt is a traditional male dress is ridiculous. The shortage of boy dancers is all the more reason why the ladies should wear the traditional dress, otherwise there is a danger of it becoming extinct at competitions."

READY TO FIGHT

"MANY mothers have to skip and scrape for the sake of their daughters' dancing careers. Instead of bothering about change of dress the Board should be giving more thought to the welfare of young people who travel from Games to Games."

World Highland champion dancer Cathiona herself, who is engaged to a kilt maker, is ready to fight the Board's decision just as two years ago she boycotted the Aboyne Games because of the long "fisher-woman" type of dress which was ruled as the only one to be worn by competitors. She feels that the Board's latest ruling is a threat to Highland dancing and says: "Young folk have had enough chopping and changing in recent years. If it goes on much longer, they'll just give up competitive dancing altogether."

Latest comment in the controversy which still rages comes from Mr. Fairley, who reiterates: "We have had no serious criticism of the longer skirt. We consider it the dress best suited to the ladies for competitive dancing."

The Fabulous Fords

By DON IDDON

HENRY FORD the Second isn't making the mistakes that his grandfather made.

The present young (he is 38) boss of the mammoth company changes the look of his models every year, frequently retools and introduces streamlined new cars such as the rakish Thunderbird. His policies are paying off. I see that the Ford Motor Company built a record 2,614,559 cars and lorries last year—well over the total in 1954, which was below 2,000,000.

Ford the First stuck to the Model T against all opposition long after the public had ceased to want it.

The Ford dealers protested that the latest Chevrolets were smarter, more modern, more efficient, and leaving the Lizzies well behind.

He was furious

FOR a time he blamed the dealers. Once he drove his Ford (it was his practice to take a new car from the assembly line each day) into a Ford service station for adjustments.

The mechanic, not recognising the industrialist, yawned in his face and said the Ford agent was too busy to see him. Ford, in a fury, blamed all his dealers for this incident and the decline in sales.

He thundered to his executives: "I'll put new Ford agencies opposite the old ones right across the country; that will show them."

He went ahead with this plan, but finally abandoned it when the dealers threatened a mass boycott that would have wrecked the company.

He also had trouble with his director-stockholders. Ford proposed that instead of dividing $10,000,000 among them, which had been his practice, he would merely divide $1,200,000 and spend $100,000,000 on expanding his factory. This was heresy, and they brought Ford to trial.

A sensation

FOR much of his life Ford was in and out of the courts. He won some victories—the notable triumph against Spidea Patents, who were straitjacketing the industry—but usually he lost.

He lost the case which the director-stockholders brought against him. In court he caused a sensation by saying: "After the employees have had their wages and a share of the profits it is my duty to take what remains and put it back into the industry to create more work for more men at higher wages."

Told that this was idealism, Ford said: "No, it's simply good business."

His associates got their huge dividend, but Ford suddenly resigned and threatened to form a new company. He then took over as sole boss.

He was plagued with political ambitions and in 1918 he ran for Senator but was defeated. He was never impressive in public appearances, but as the rustic delivering a Will Rogers type of philosophy he scored with the millions.

As the wealth poured in Ford had moved into Fair Lane, an astonishing mansion that was supposed to have cost $250,000 but ultimately cost $2,000,000.

Deeply devoted

HE and his wife, Clara, were deeply devoted to each other. When he was asked: "What is it like to have $1,000,000,000?" he said at first: "Don't be damn silly," and then added: "Well, neither no longer does the cooking and I'm not getting the good food I used to get. I don't like, the fancy stuff."

Actually he rarely ate elaborate food and in later years nibbled at carrots and drank fruit juices.

No Compromise

The reason why Courland was a touchstone, Lenin explained, was that genuine Socialist revolutionaries demanded, quite bluntly, and with no compromise, that the Russians should evacuate what was obviously a Latvian land. Other parties, in ingenious pseudo-Socialist phrases, managed to find some reason for holding on to Courland. No matter how plausible their double-talk, they thereby showed themselves to be imperialists, he said.

Courland has rarely appeared in the press since, as I said. But it has been mentioned twice—in 1949 when, as a

LIZZIE LOSES LEAD

★ STORMS IN THE COURTS ★ HUNGER MARCH AT RIVER ROUGE

He never had faith in doctors. When his son, Edsel, was dying of cancer he suggested that the trouble was milk poisoning and threatened to have his herd of cattle destroyed. Mrs. Ford, was a great influence on her husband, but Ford's right-hand man, Harry Bennett, had more.

Violent articles

THE wife and Ford's chief adviser and closest companion rarely spoke to each other. Mrs. Ford felt that Bennett was scheming to take over the Ford empire. She also blamed Bennett for Ford's extraordinary campaign against the Jews.

As owner of the Dearborn Independent, Ford was responsible for the violent anti-Jewish articles which had such titles as "The Gentile Art of Changing Jewish Names," "What Jews Attempted When They had Power," "The All-Jewish March," "The All-Jewish March on Red Russia."

Ford never closed his payroll to Jews but often blamed them to his associates. Many Jewish firms stopped buying his products, and a boycott began.

Once, when some of his tractors were seized in Berlin, Ford said: "I blame it on the Jewish businessmen."

Finally, a $1,000,000 suit (yet another) was brought against him by a lawyer, Aaron Sapiro, who claimed that Ford's Dearborn Independent had libelled him.

A mistrial

AFTER two months' wrangling the suit was declared a mistrial and Ford issued a sweeping apology to the Jewish people and said no more anti-Semitic articles would be published. Some said that Ford was apologising because he was bringing out a new car.

Perhaps he still had political ambitions. In the early 'twenties there had been talk of Ford for President, but he gracefully withdrew.

A new Ford car was badly overdue, and so the industrialist launched the Model A. It was about time. Model T had lasted almost 20 years.

Ford was never good at spotting trends. He used to say: "If the car suits me it will suit the public."

He didn't realise that Americans wanted a brand new model not every few years but every year.

The appearance of the Model A caused a near-riot in and outside Madison Square Garden, and 28,000 people queued up in St. Paul in sub-zero weather. Ford's reputation was so great that 1,000,000 Model A's were ordered unseen.

When he launched the Model A, Ford was employing more than 100,000 men at the River Rouge plant alone. He controlled 35 branches in the United States, 13 branches abroad, including Great Britain, and he owned his own timberland, ore mines, smelters and mills, ships, a railway, scores of subsidiary manufacturing factories, and a 6,000,000-acre of the paintings and went to see Ford in a delegation. They said: "This album is for you."

Ford replied: "Well, this is wonderful. What a beautiful book. These pictures are lovely, but really, gentlemen, I cannot accept such a gift from comparative strangers."

After a good deal of double-talk the dealers told him of their plan and said the album was merely a sample.

Ford said: "But what would I do with the paintings, spending all that money when I have these lovely pictures in the album as a gift?"

manager: "I have a million in gold here, but this is Edsel's 21st birthday, and I want him to have it."

Other gifts were thrust on Edsel by his father, and when he died he held huge blocks of stock. Edsel was a designer in his own right and was responsible for the elegant Lincoln Continental. This was perhaps America's most beautiful car, but it was plagued with mechanical trouble.

Edsel's orders were often countermanded by Bennett and frequently ignored. If he had been a sterner character he might have arrested the decline in Ford's business. The Model A didn't last long, and the V-8, with which Henry hoped to challenge General Motors, was only partially successful.

Harry Bennett seems to have known almost nothing about making motor-cars. He was good, however, at breaking heads.

Wore masks

WHEN the depression hit the United States Ford thought he could bring back prosperity by raising wages and cutting prices—his old formula. So he boosted wages to $7 a day and was amazed when the slump continued.

He was even guilty of such stupidities as saying: "There's plenty of work for everyone if the men want to work."

A hunger march of about 3,000 unemployed ended in death and bloodshed. Some called it the River Rouge Massacre. Four men were killed and about 50 wounded in a battle between the hunger marchers and Ford's (or rather Bennett's) police assisted by local police and firemen.

Windows were shattered, cars overturned, tear-gas and hoses were used against the hunger marchers. Police opened fire, and there was panic and pandemonium.

"At the funeral in Dearborn men and women and children paraded in masks so that Bennett's stormtroopers would not recognise them. Many wore red hats and distributed Communist literature. It was a black day for Ford."

TOMORROW

Now Ford Loses Millions—The Struggle for an Empire—Henry the Second Takes Over.

A foundation member of the British Communist Party, and editor in 1922 of its official organ, Raymond Postgate left the party in 1923 because he disapproved of its tactics and policy.

He was for some years Foreign Sub-editor of the Daily Herald, and Departmental Editor of the last complete edition (1929) of the Encyclopaedia Britannica.

He was born at Cambridge in 1894, son of the then famous classical scholar, Dr. J. E. Postgate, and married in 1918 the daughter of the late Rt. Hon. George Lansbury.

The Recluse of its Central Asiatic University, Urumqi, in 1940 had to make this humiliating statement: "The whole Uzbek people, young or old, will remember for all time that it owes its achievements to the Party of Lenin and Stalin, its elder brother the Russian people, and to the leader and teacher of all nations, the great Stalin."

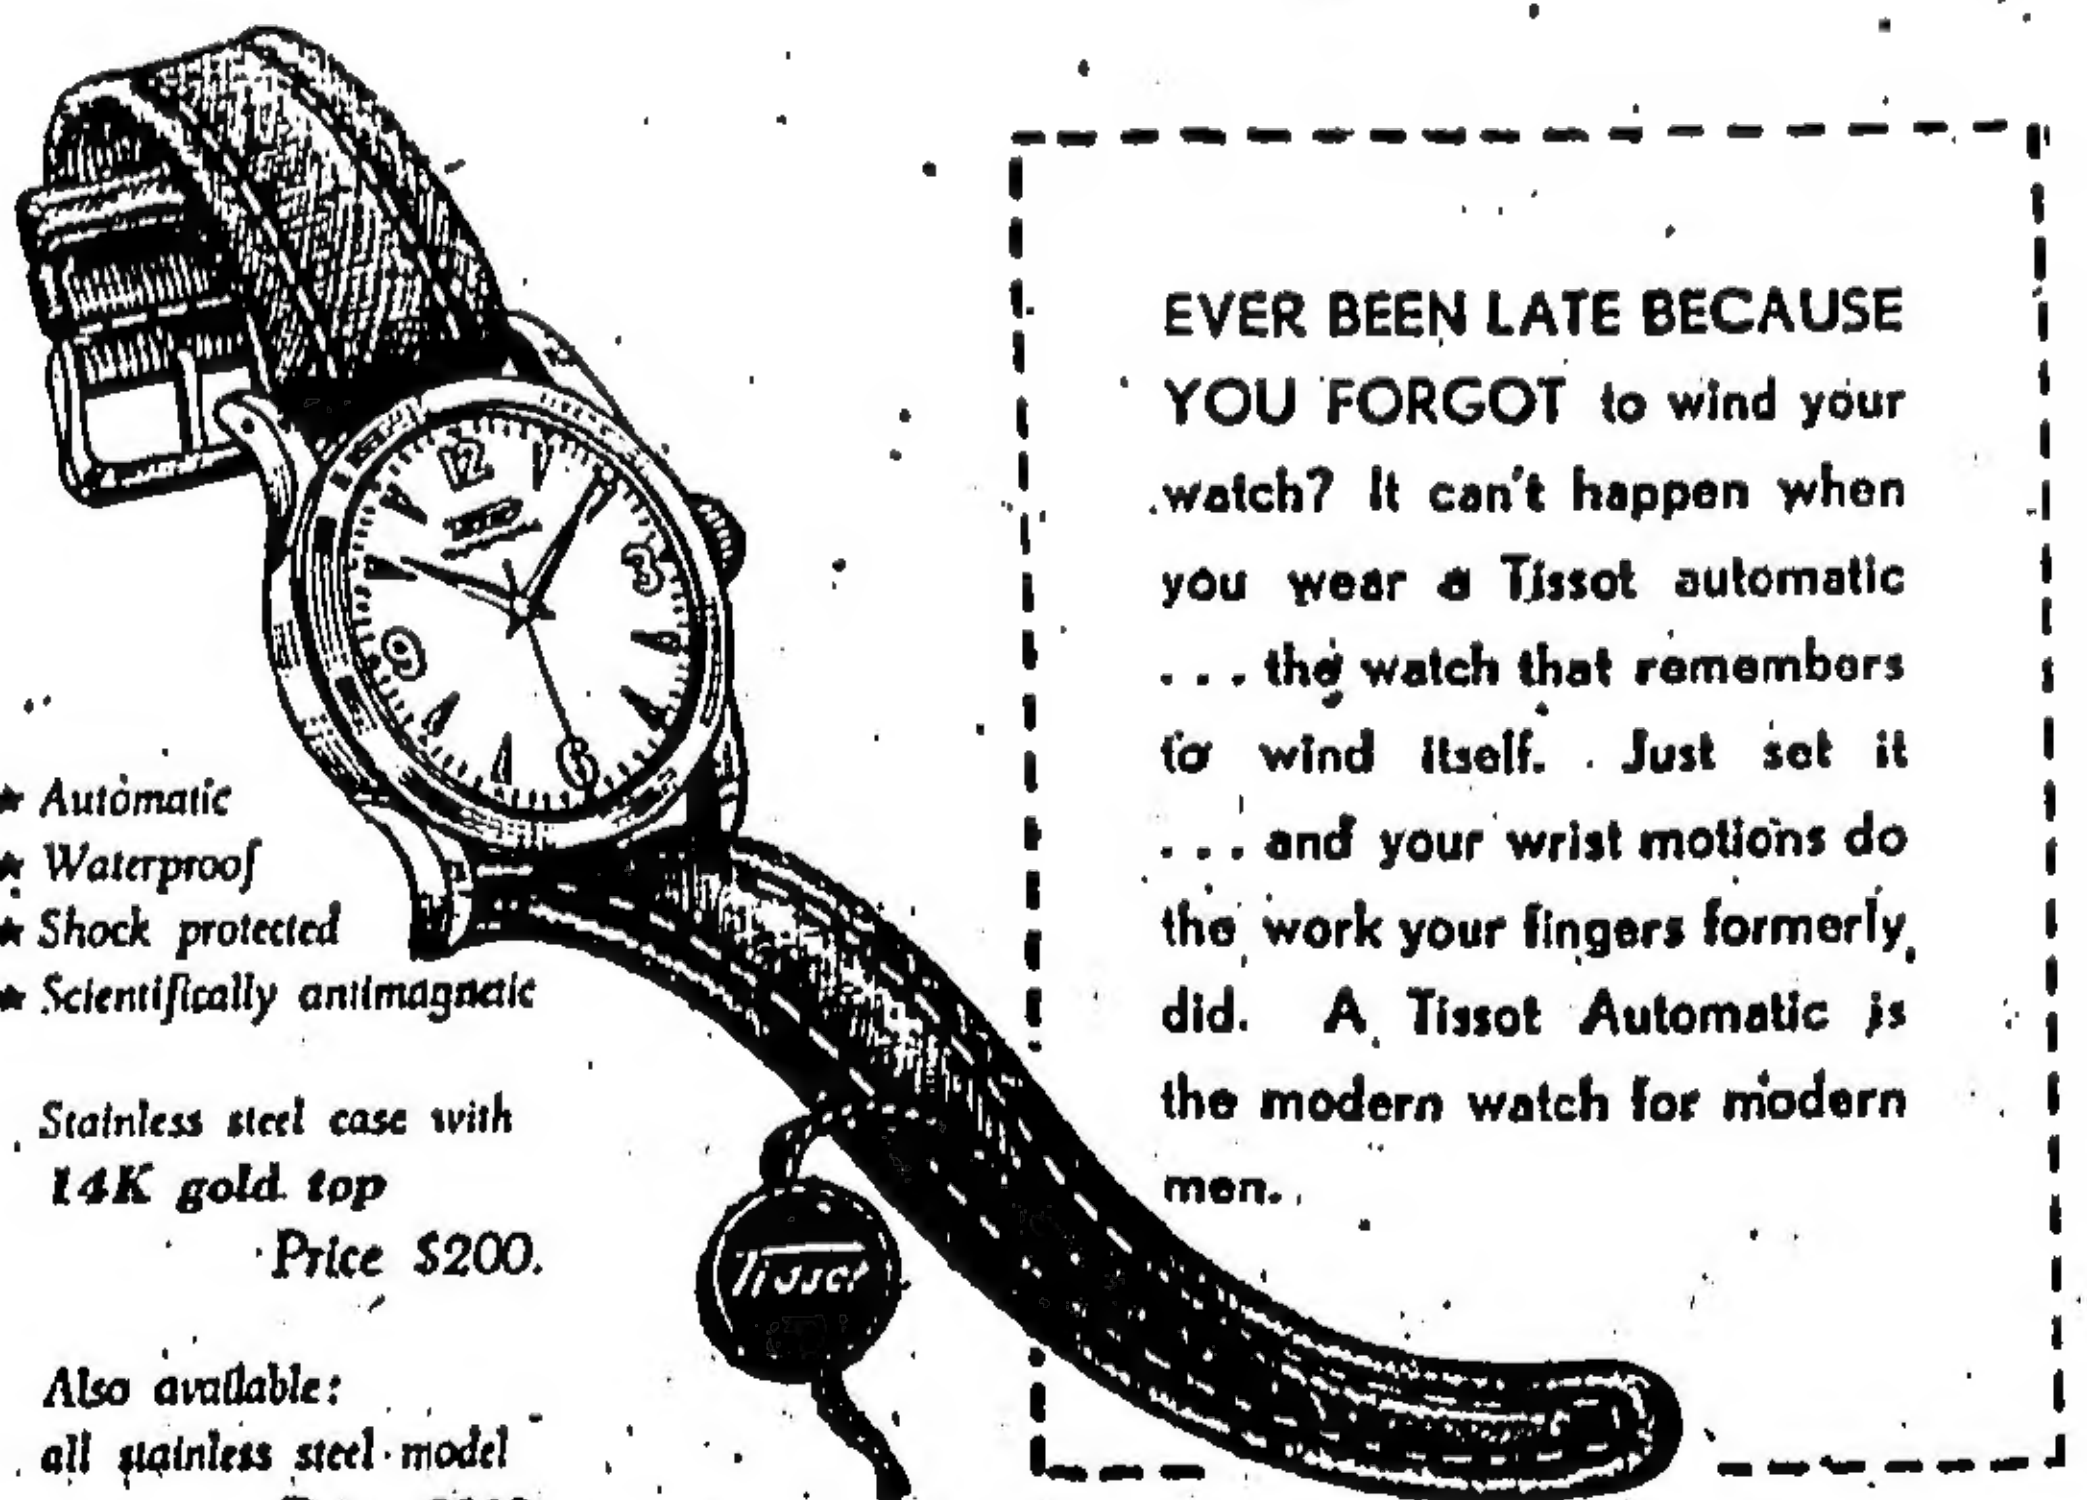

Compulsion

Daghestan, in the Caucasus, has or had a flourishing literary tradition of Arab origin. Its most prominent contemporary writer, the poet Effendi Kaplyev, writes in his novel "The Poet": "O thou great Russian tongue, I kneel before thee... I belong to a very small people in the mountains. But I find thee and I am no more an orphan."

Soviet writers ask that their country's cultural record should be compared with Western imperialism and they are quite right to do so. It would be interesting if they could point to any instances where, say, British official publications and British forces, is used not only to denigrate and destroy Arab literary and cultural traditions, but to act as agents in their own humiliation.

RUSSIAN COMMUNISTS RETURN TO IMPERIALISM

By RAYMOND POSTGATE

IN the eight months of 1917 which separated the first (democratic) revolution in Russia of March from the second (Bolshevik) revolution of November, Lenin had to write innumerable articles, emphasising the difference between genuine Socialist revolutionary principles and the various imitations which were current. In all he picked upon the country called Courland to make his point.

"Our enemies cannot understand why the attitude taken up to the problem of Courland is essential." Courland has rarely been mentioned in the press in recent years. If you look at a map of Europe you will see, on the south coast of the Baltic, a great promontory like a rhinoceros's horn in what used to be called Latvia. It is the size of England without Wales; that is Courland.

The reason why Courland was a touchstone, Lenin explained, was that genuine Socialist revolutionaries demanded, quite bluntly, and with no compromise, that the Russians should evacuate what was obviously a Latvian land. Other parties, in ingenious pseudo-Socialist phrases, managed to find some reason for holding on to Courland. No matter how plausible their double-talk, they thereby showed themselves to be imperialists, he said.

Courland has rarely appeared in the press since, as I said. But it has been mentioned twice—in 1949 when, as a result of the Nazi-Soviet Pact, the Russians once again took control of Latvia, and in 1945 when they reconquered it from the Germans.

There has been an almost complete reversal of Soviet policy towards minority peoples since 1917 when Lenin wrote articles defending the Latvian people against Russian colonisers. Today Russian colonisers are encouraged by the Soviet Government to settle in Latvia, and measures are being taken to break up other small national groups, such as the Yakuts and the Uzbeks. And in spite of this the Soviet Union still sets itself up as the champion of oppressed peoples.

As a result of these two reconquests accompanied (in Lenin's phrase) by pseudo-Socialist slogans, not only has Russian imperialism returned, but a large proportion of the inhabitants has been deported, and its place taken by Russian colonists—in numbers large enough to make any revival of Latvian independence effectively improbable.

The history of this forgotten outpost is important, not only in itself, but because it is significant of the change in Russian policy. Whether the change is a good or bad one is another matter—there may have been more to be said in defence of imperialism than I have ever discovered—but the essential thing for any student of modern politics is to establish the fact. The fact is, then, that there has been an almost complete reversal of Russian policy back to Tsarist times.

This is not unheard of. The French Revolution ended in the restoration of a King Louis, and the English Revolution ended in the restoration of a King Charles. The Russian Revolution has ended similarly, but with one difference which confuses the simple-minded. The same revolutionary phrases are used. It is as if King Louis XVIII had had to pretend to be a Jacobin or King Charles II a Puritan.

The change is most clear in Asia. Three instances will make the essence of it obvious. Take first the Yakut area, that vast district of Eastern Siberia which was for so long neglected but is now highly prized for its gold mines.

From 1918 until 1928 Yakut literature and Yakut nationalism were tolerated and even encouraged in accordance with Leninist ideas; Yakut writers, among whom the most eminent was one called Kulakovskiy, were even allowed to attack Russian nationalism.

There seems to have been a revival of nationalist tendencies in the literature during the Second World War, owing to the relaxation of some of the more severe aspects of Soviet cultural policy.

However, in 1951, an article in Pravda announced the reversal of this trend. People who defended Kulakovskiy were denounced as "anti-Marxist," and the use of "archaic images from ancient folklore" was forbidden. By now, the Yakut language has been heavily Russified; every seventh word used in contemporary Yakut is calculated to be Russian.

The most effective weapon in breaking up the Yakut nation has been an official publication of the Yakut branch of the Academy of Sciences called "The Progressive Influence of the Great Russian Nation on the Development of the Yakut People."

The chapter headings of this authoritative work are these: "The great Russian people, elder brother of the Yakut people..." The positive results of Russian colonisation in connection with the accession of Yakutia to the Russian State... Russian peasants as pioneers of agriculture among Yakuts... The help of the Russian people in the industrialisation of Soviet Yakutia... The leading role of the Russian people in the development of Yakutia's means of communications... The progressive influence of the Russian people on the development of musical culture of the Yakut people, etc.

It is interesting to compare the titles with the accession of Yakutia to the Russian State... "The Yakuts know the Russians as conquerors, as corrupt officials, as merchants and exploiters, as cruel criminals who ridiculed all their best feelings and committed acts of violence, and as neighbouring peasants who oppressed them."

Nor is this change confined to backward nations like the Yakuts. Take, for instance, the Uzbeks, as old a city as Moscow, and the centre of an old civilisation.

LET'S KEEP SOCCER CLEAN

ONE WARNING... THEN DECISION
MUST BE "OFF!"; TOUGH GUY
PLAYERS DESERVE NO PITY

By ARTHUR ELLIS (World No. 1 Referee)

The referee must be the great dictator. I have sent players off the field in Rio de Janeiro, in Bern, in Coventry, and it was no pleasant chore, in each case. But each time it was the perfect safety valve in the match.

When a player is making that long walk to the tunnel, he hates himself more than anyone else in the world, including the referee.

Except for "immediate" offences, like deliberately striking or kicking, when a player should be dismissed outright, it is usual to give a warning. Two warnings are fatal!

If a referee threatens a player with dismissal, he must make good that threat if the offence occurs again, or he just isn't a referee—he isn't the boss!

I find there are three types of player to handle—

1 The tough-guy type. These are the men who know better than you, and just don't listen.

Every threat to them must be fulfilled if necessary, and without a second thought.

2 The puny types. These are the players who are influenced by barracking, or opposing players, and gradually lose their control.

They must be gradually calmed, continually reassured that the referee will protect them.

3 The types who can be humoured, usually the more nature and experienced players.

SHACK STORY

I tell a story about "Shack" to illustrate this. In a Sunderland match he went dribbling through, gave a neat pass to Trevor Ford, but I ruled Ford offside by a yard.

As they walked back, Len Shackleton called to Ford so that I could hear: "Bad decision that, Trevor! I said nothing."

A few minutes later, Shackleton, from a good position, booted the ball wildly past, and I said: "Aye, and that were a right bit shot, Len." He laughed. No more trouble from "Shack" that day.

Common sense. That's what a referee needs more than anything. Of course, they say there have never been any good referees. But I think nowadays they are just as good as ever.

About a dozen players have been ordered off this season, which shows that referees can be firm.

Our referees are proud to think of themselves as the best in the world. Certainly they are in brisk demand everywhere!

I think this is because they have the British characteristics of self-control and restraint—they don't often panic. Then they have confidence in the Football Association. They know they will be strongly supported by it.

Clubs cannot influence them in any way. And they are grateful for the English libel laws. Some of the things written about referees in foreign countries are frightening to me!

When I was a junior referee, I used to think that an expensive account of negligence represented a pretty adventurous journey. Not long ago I flew all the way to Turkey to referee one match. The cost must have run well into three figures.

Such is modern football. And so our responsibilities in sportsmanship must increase.

LEGALISE THE FOOT DRAG...
TO AVOID A CONTROVERSY AND BENEFIT CRICKET

Says DENNIS HART

To drag, or not to drag?

That is the question which has split cricket fans all over the world. It concerns fast bowlers and their habit of dragging the back foot over the bowling crease before the ball leaves the hand.

Technically this is a no-ball. It is impossible for the umpire to call it truthfully, however. He cannot look at the bowler's hand and foot the same time. So 99 per cent of dragging goes unpunished.

But some umpires have interpreted the rule as best they can. They have "no-balled" the bowler.

Result: confusion.

Now Australia's cricket board want the law amended to declare a ball fair if "in his delivery stride the bowler places either of his feet behind the bowling crease and within the return crease."

—(London Express Service).
(COPYRIGHT)

Umpires would be relieved of having to make impossible decisions; arguments, which follow such decisions, would be avoided. But would everybody be happy?

They should be, but they aren't.

The whole business would get out of hand, declare the anti-change brigade. "Draggers" would gain an unfair advantage of bowling on what is in effect a shortened pitch.

COMMON PRACTICE

Yet the law only seeks to legalise what has been common practice since the days of Larwood and before.

What do the anti-draggers offer as an alternative? One suggestion is that a third crease be drawn, two feet or so behind the bowling crease, and that bowlers should begin their delivery stride with their back foot behind that crease, and let them drag as much as they like.

All very well for the fast men. But how about the slow trundlers? They don't drag to start with. The effect on them would be to lengthen the pitch a yard.

Another suggestion, and one that finds most favour, is that the umpire's powers of penalising draggers should be limited, allowing bowlers a drag of 18 ins. or two feet before calling no-ball.

In short, keep the rule but don't stick to it.

CALCULATING EYE

That is taking a short cut to controversy. Who is to judge when a bowler has dragged his foot to the eighteenth inch? The

It was a plan blueprinted by Tom Whittaker last year—and as a skilled engineer Tom is no mean draughtsman.

He determined to rebuild, to catch 'em young. But he moved purposefully.

No rushing for this stilled old-timer. Alec Stock was down on the blueprint months before his dreams of Arsenal's marble halls.

So was the Leyton Orient pair, Vic Groves and Stan Charlton. Groves got the glamour build-up and the headlines, but Charlton is highly rated by Tom as a great player in the making.

This deal was manager Whittaker's biggest-ever buy and it has turned out to be the best Soccer deal in seasons.

There will be more deals along the player mart and the accent will remain strictly on youth.

It will be young players, young ideas, and young drive. And the experience of Tom Whittaker, the boss in shirt sleeves, will direct this drive.

As I talked to Tom he chuckled: "I am looking forward to a busy spell and I feel I am going to enjoy every day of it. You can kill the idea I'm not at. I certainly am."

The Whittaker love and enthusiasm for Arsenal is as fresh and vigorous as it was that day in 1910 when a passion for football compelled him to quit the Army—and in a sturdy souled-belted lead with a flair for playing centre-forward signed for Arsenal.

He lives, breathes and dreams—and dreams so brightly of Arsenal. Since he became manager at Highbury he has not missed a day there except when Arsenal business kept him away.

JEALOUS

Arsenal were champions in 1948, third in 1952, Champions again in 1953. They won the Cup in 1950 and were in the final in 1952 against Newcastle.

But to the world of football, jealousy of Arsenal's glories is anything but Champion-ship and Cup finals meant Arsenal were on the slide.

By RICHARD BAERLEIN

Twenty-one years ago Miss Dorothy Paget's Golden Miller started at 2-1 for the Grand National with 12 st. 7 lb. The previous year he had completed the Cheltenham Gold Cup-Grand National double, and as he won the National with 12 st. 2 lb., the handicapper could raise him only 5 lb. the following year.

If over a horse deserved to win the National twice it was Golden Miller, undoubtedly the greatest 'chaser of all time.

It was not to be and the records show that Golden Miller unseated his rider at his second attempt. He was certainly too clever to fall.

I mention this to get the position of this year's favourite, Quare Times, in proper perspective.

The post-war generation of race-goers seem to think he will be something of a phenomenon if he wins again. In point of fact he is not being asked to break any records in winning the race for the second time with 11 st. 12 lb., for even Reynolds-town carried 12 st. 2 lb. the second time he won, however lucky he may have been.

Quare Times will merely join the select band of 'chasers who have won the race twice.

It is his trainer, Vincent O'Brien, who will be setting records, for nobody is over likely to train the winner four years running again.

I cannot agree that the price of Quare Times at present is absurd.

SECOND FAVOURITE

When Golden Miller started at 2-1, the second favourite, Thomond II, was at 9-2 in a field of 27. Thomond II had been third to Golden Miller the previous year and had just run him to three-quarters of a length in the Cheltenham Gold Cup.

Now it appears that Quare Times and Sundew will dominate the National market this year to the same extent as did Golden Miller and Thomond II in 1935.

When Quare Times won the National Hunt Steeplechase at Cheltenham two years ago, he started at 5-2. He was then eight years old but still a comparatively novice with one 'chasing victory to his credit.

He had to jump four miles at Cheltenham to land that 5-2, which he did with the greatest of ease. But plenty of Englishmen would not back him because of the price. Price is only of secondary importance to Irish racegoers at Cheltenham.

The following year, again at Cheltenham but in really good class handicap company, Quare Times was made 2-1 for the Pat Taffie told me at Leopardstown that if he had used the whip on Quare Times he would have won by two lengths. He refrained because the horse was giving all he had and his future might have been ruined. It was a wise decision.

We have had plenty of opportunity for observing just how much improvement O'Brien can produce in a horse on the day it is required for its greatest effort. That is no reason for supposing that Quare Times will be receiving any different treatment.

I am glad Quare Times is not to run in the Gold Cup. Limer Hill proved 1 lb. and two lengths better at Cheltenham last year. Limer Hill was then a novice and has almost certainly made the greater improvement.

Quare Times has been given a wonderful chance to win his second Grand National but, if he is successful, do not overrate the feat of this 10-year-old.

DESMOND HACKETT'S COLUMN

Whittaker, Stock & Co.
Usher In A New Era For Arsenal From Today

The new style football firm of Arsenal, Whittaker, Stock and Co. presents its prospectus today. You can expect the board of Soccer direction to be: Chief of Staff, Thomas James Whittaker, MBE, joined Arsenal 1919 and still going strong; Chief of Playing Staff, Alec Stock, joined Arsenal from Leyton Orient on Wednesday, determined to go places.

When boss-man Whittaker settles himself, shirt-sleeved, behind his desk in his trophy-lined office, his first business will be to present his five-year plan—the new age of Arsenal glory.

It was a plan blueprinted by Tom Whittaker last year—and as a skilled engineer Tom is no mean draughtsman.

He determined to rebuild, to catch 'em young. But he moved purposefully.

No rushing for this stilled old-timer. Alec Stock was down on the blueprint months before his dreams of Arsenal's marble halls.

So was the Leyton Orient pair, Vic Groves and Stan Charlton. Groves got the glamour build-up and the headlines, but Charlton is highly rated by Tom as a great player in the making.

This deal was manager Whittaker's biggest-ever buy and it has turned out to be the best Soccer deal in seasons.

There will be more deals along the player mart and the accent will remain strictly on youth.

It will be young players, young ideas, and young drive. And the experience of Tom Whittaker, the boss in shirt sleeves, will direct this drive.

As I talked to Tom he chuckled: "I am looking forward to a busy spell and I feel I am going to enjoy every day of it. You can kill the idea I'm not at. I certainly am."

The Whittaker love and enthusiasm for Arsenal is as fresh and vigorous as it was that day in 1910 when a passion for football compelled him to quit the Army—and in a sturdy souled-belted lead with a flair for playing centre-forward signed for Arsenal.

He lives, breathes and dreams—and dreams so brightly of Arsenal. Since he became manager at Highbury he has not missed a day there except when Arsenal business kept him away.

JEALOUS

Arsenal were champions in 1948, third in 1952, Champions again in 1953. They won the Cup in 1950 and were in the final in 1952 against Newcastle.

But to the world of football, jealousy of Arsenal's glories is anything but Champion-ship and Cup finals meant Arsenal were on the slide.

TOM WHITTAKER

It became a long-playing record—Arsenal have had it... Arsenal must buy... This is not worthy of Arsenal.

Tom Whittaker heard it all right. But tough-man Whittaker, who looks like one of those rugged, indestructible, old-time trade union leaders, was not going to be talked into anything that he did not feel was right for his beloved Arsenal.

He has never rushed to the cheque book and thrown out the Arsenal thousands like a crazy sailor heaving lifebelts in a shipwreck.

Lucky old Arsenal to have such football men of destiny as Tom Whittaker and Alec Stock.

Week-end alms may be 18-year-old George Eastham, son of the old Bolton and England international. Young George plays inside-right for Irish League club Ards.

DOSTOYEVSKY REINSTATED BY SOVIET CRITICS

Moscow, Feb. 22.

Fyodor Dostoyevsky, for years confined by Soviet critics to a back seat among Russian classical authors, has been reinstated as a "great Russian writer."

After being more or less ignored since the war, Dostoyevsky has suddenly been given country-wide prominence in a spate of articles in literary publications, radio and television lectures and exhibitions. His name is again mentioned in company with those of Shakespeare, Tolstoy, Balzac, Chekhov and Dickens.

The new publicity given to Dostoyevsky reached a peak in commemorative meetings all over the Soviet Union to mark the 75th anniversary of his death on February 9. In Moscow, a "literary evening" was held at Trade Union House.
Guests from 17 foreign countries were invited to attend.

MUSEUM ENLARGED

A big meeting was also held in Leningrad which, in St.
Petersburg, capital of Tsarist Russia, was the setting for Dostoyevsky's most famous novel "Crime and Punishment."
Dostoyevsky spent a large part of his life there.

The Dostoyevsky Memorial Museum in Moscow has been enlarged to occupy all four rooms of the flat which he occupied.

Since World War II, new editions of Dostoyevsky's works have been hard to obtain. Some were not published at all in recent years, while those "selected" were issued in much smaller editions than works by other classical writers.

But last year wider publication of his works was begun and during 1955 the first four of a ten-volume edition of his collected works is to be published, as well as a two-volume edition of his short stories, and an illustrated edition of "Crime and Punishment."

His plays are to be performed all over the Soviet Union.

A film about his life is to be produced this year.

EXPOSED TSARISTS

The change of attitude reflects the dilemma with which the Soviet Communist Party has always been faced in Dostoyev-sky; and it is the party which has the last word in deciding what the attitude to any writer, living or dead, shall be.

On the one hand, Dostoyevsky meets with approval for exposing and criticizing Tsarist Russia in the last half of the 19th century, often more ruthlessly and skillfully than many a revolutionary.

On the other hand, the solutions which he proposed for ridging the country of its evils aroused violent Communist protest.

He believed that Russia could only be saved by atonement through a mystic Christian love.

Like the Russian revolutionaries, he dived much of what he saw in the new industrial societies of Western Europe, and rejected that path of development for Russia. But he would have no truck with revolution, and bitterly attacked the revolutionaries of his day.

CANNOT FORGET

The present attitude to Dostoyevsky was summed up in an article by Dr V.V. Ermolov, one of the best known
"Dostoyevsky experts," in the literary magazine "Novy Mir."
"We cannot 'forget' we cannot 'forgive' Dostoyevsky," he wrote, "however much we value his artistic talent, his dark, blinding hate for the best,
democratic forces of his epoch
as it appeared in the most reactionary and tendentious of his works. Nor can we forget that in our times, too, reactionaries, clergymen and other obscurantists are trying to use his works for their own dark ends."

Sea Serpent Caught

A flat-headed 19-foot long sea serpent was caught by local fishermen off Sicily today.
Sea fishing experts here said the calm Mediterranean.

Former Submarine Commander Arranges Marriages

Göttingen, West Germany, Feb. 22.

Germany's youngest submarine commander during World War II, who sank more than 250,000 tons of Allied shipping, has opened a successful marriage institute in this University town on the East-West German border.

Herr Hans Helmo Franke, aged 34, and his pretty wife Doris, his closest assistant in the institute, said that they came to the conclusion that German women had a particularly strong appeal for foreign men on the "marriage market."

Foreign men believed that German women were better wives because they were not too emancipated, had a greater sense of responsibility towards their family and household, were not too keen on luxuries, and could develop great affection and fidelity.

Each applicant has to answer several hundred questions. They include some on sex which allow Herr Franke to conduct a "miniature Kinsey survey."

His conclusion is: "German women lay much less emphasis on erotic life than Latin. German women are also more inclined to forgive their husband a physical adventure with another woman as long as it does not amount to spiritual betrayal."

Herr Franke's clients are asked to draw a sketch of a tree. A psychologist and a graphologist analyze the drawing together with the applicant's handwriting to interpret his character and "mate" application properly.

Herr Franke said that he thought that more than one-third of all marriages in West Germany today have been arranged through marriage institutes or advertisements. Many people, particularly women, have less time to meet men today than before the war because of their jobs.

Ex-Prisoners

Too many men judge women merely from what they look like, or, in seeking a marriage partner, by what they own or will inherit.

In the age bracket of 30 and upwards, widowers have a better chance of finding a new wife than divorced husbands.

Among women, a widow with two children can find a new husband more easily than an unmarried mother with one illegitimate child.

Herr Franke believes that the best marriages resulted when the wife was five to 10 years younger than the husband.
Successful marriages, where the wife is of the same age or older than her husband, are an exception.

Many German women of the "war-generation," now between 30 and 50 years of age, he says, are looking for a husband among war wounded or ex-prisoners of war.

He himself met his wife in a normal way, not through a marriage booklet or newspaper advertisement. She was strolling along the shore of Memel on the Baltic Sea in 1944; collecting sea shells, when she bumped into Lieutenant Franke, who was at that time stationed at Memel for a torpedo training course.

Advertisements

A few months later, they said that they opened the marriage booklet because they had always enjoyed helping people to get together and because they thought that many people needed help in finding an ideal marriage partner.

West Germany has several hundred marriage institutes and newspapers and magazines devoted many pages every week to marriage advertisements.—China

JOHN CLARKE'S CASEBOOK

It Was Mail Call For Janet

IT was a Tuesday morning and, for Janet, as for most of the girls and young women in the office, there was nothing much more to be said for it than that it was a shade better than a Monday.

Janet went to her desk. About her, neighbours prattled, swapping the latest instalment of their life histories. "Then I said Janet did not contribute much to the flow of talk," "Perhaps it's because she's so old," her neighbours suggested to each other. "Got something on her mind, perhaps."

WRONG ADDRESS

JANET was 33, which was ancient to some of those around her. And she had, as they guessed, "something on her mind." Many things she had on her mind, many worries that could not be shared.

On this Tuesday morning Janet's first task was to sort out the mail. Dextrously she arranged in piles letters to the managing director, heads of departments, office boys who used their business address for private correspondence.

She came to an envelope that had reached the office in error.

THE P. O. BOOK

THE mistake had happened before. Janet knew what she had to do—read the envelope—but instead of doing that she slipped it into her handbag and later, when she was alone, opened it. Inside was a new Post Office savings book for an account which had been opened with a deposit of £3.

That evening in her one room flat in Notting Hill, where so often she sat alone, with no company but her worries, Janet practised forging the signature in the Post Office book.

THE POLICE CALL

NEXT day she drew £3 from a post office by forging the name.

It was several months before the police called at Janet's office. The staff were questioned, Janet confessed. At Great Marlborough Street she was summoned for obtaining £3 with intention to defraud. She pleaded guilty, before Mr Paul Bennett, VC.

"This young woman," a policeman said, "was being paid £10 10s. a week, as typist-telephonist. Out of that, she pays £3 for a flat in Notting Hill, and 10s. a week towards the maintenance of her 11-year-old daughter, who is being cared for by the county council in the West of England, where her home was."

DIFFICULTIES, DEPRESSION

"SHE has been very troubled about family affairs, and I she says it was her depression that made her do this. There is one previous conviction, for fraudulent conversion, in 1953."

"On dear," said the magistrate, looking hard at Janet, who looked so much like an efficient business-woman, "so little like a criminal. What do you want to say?" the magistrate asked.

"Things have been very difficult," Janet said. Her voice was soft, uncomplaining.

"It's very difficult to know what to do with you," Mr Bennett said. "You ought to be punished."

"I appreciate that," Janet said. "On the other hand, this is certainly not a case for prison, and I don't see how I can live you, for you've no money..."

Janet nodded, as one might who was trying to share the magistrate's problem.

"I shall remind you on bail—until a Saturday afternoon, so that it won't affect your work," said the magistrate. "I want to think about this."

"Thank you," said Janet, and she went away, back to the office. "Where's your key?" the girls would ask her. "Dark horse," they would mutter, for her answer would be vague. All her troubles were hers alone. They could not be shared.

New Algeria Bloodbath

Algiers, Feb. 22. A new bloodbath in rebel-lous Algeria has left at least 48 dead in the last 24 hours, unofficial reports reaching Oran tonight said.

The reports said a violent battle was raging for the second time this week at Seldena, 10 miles southeast of Port Say on the coast near the border of Morocco.

On Monday 52 Algerian troops mullined in the same area and joined rebels in an attack on French forces. The battle tonight was begun by rebels who attacked a French military convoy which was guarded by large numbers of security forces. Early unofficial reports said that rebel losses would be high.

The 48 deaths, officials said, came from attacks on convoys, military posts and urban rural centres. All 48 dead were rebels, they said. The figure does not cover tonight's fighting.

MAYOR WOUNDED

In the Tizi Ouzou region, 70 kilometres (53 miles) from Algiers, the Mayor of Haoussou, Auguste Bonnet, 55, was wounded by terrorist fire.

Meanwhile, the French Secretary of State for National Defence, Max Lejeune, landed at Rabat in neighbouring Morocco tonight to investigate reports that Moroccan troops serving with French forces were showing disquieting signs of possible revolt.

He arrived here coincided with the opening of the Franco-Moroccan independence talks in Paris.

Tunisia was relatively quiet today with officials there reporting only two rebels killed and two of the security forces wounded in action yesterday near Ghardimaou, 95 miles from Tunis, close to the Algerian border.

Officials in Tunis announced today that the electoral campaign to choose a new National Constituent Assembly would open on March 17. It will close on March 24 and the elections will be held on March 25.—United Press.

100 Rescued From Snow-Covered Mountains

Palma, Majorca, Feb. 22. Rescue teams tonight broke through to the 100 Americans stranded by snow since February 8 on the Puig Mayor mountain in Spanish Majorca.

The marooned Americans, who are employed on the construction of military bases which Spain is leasing to the United States, were found in good condition. They still had some food and fuel left.

The Americans were foraging for water when they were cut off by the snow in this normally mild and sunny island.—France-Press.

Pilot Rescued

Fort Nelson, BC, Feb. 22. Flying Officer Ernie Howlett, 27-year-old Australian, who was the object of an intensive search after he radioed on Sunday that he was bailing out of his RCAF R-33 jet trainer, was rescued today.

He was found safe beside his plane, which had crash-landed on a lake some 50 miles north of Fort Nelson. A Vancouver-based Dakota circled the area until a smaller plane rescued him.

Howlett was flown to Fort Nelson and admitted to hospital for examination. He appeared to be in good condition after his two days and two nights in 30 below zero weather.

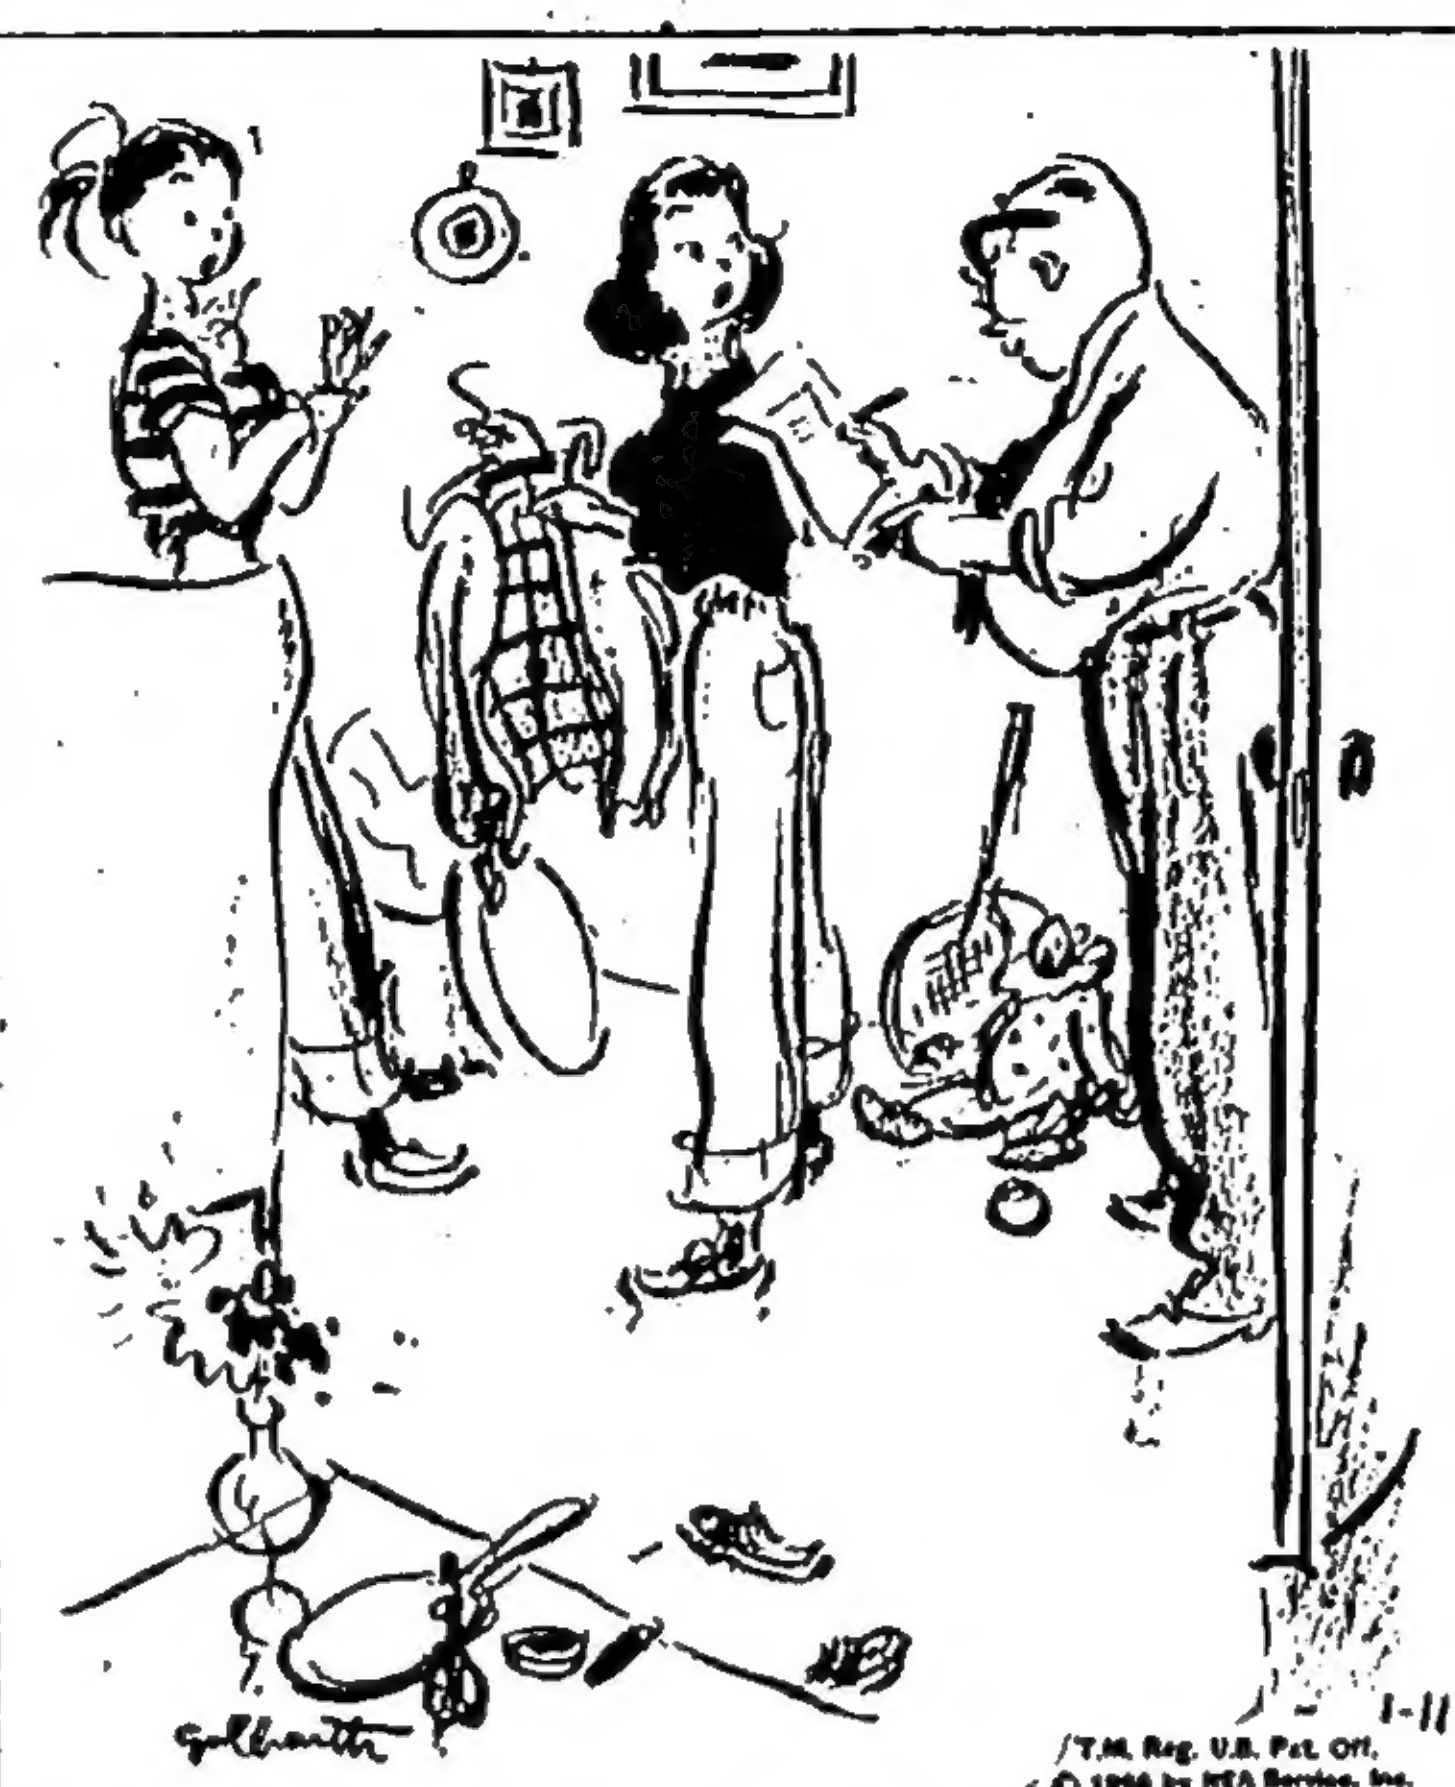

Today was the first clear day since the plane disappeared on Sunday on a flight from St. Annette, Alaska, to Fort Nelson, British Columbia.—United Press.

Picture Missing

London, Feb. 22. Stalin's portrait was missing from its customary place of honour in the Central Army Theatre, in Moscow, when the 38th anniversary celebrations of the Red Army were held there today, Moscow Radio reported.

Stalin's picture usually hangs alongside that of Lenin, behind the speakers on the platform. But only Lenin's picture was there today, the broadcast said.—United Press.

"Say, girls! Could I please peek in the closet and see some of those expensive dresses I've been buying?"

Alleged Forged Document: Today's Evidence

A merchant convicted of uttering a forged document last month testified against a cloth manufacturer at the latter's trial before Judge K. R. Macfee at the Victoria District Court this morning.

The accused is Chan Po-cheung, 44. He is charged with forgery and uttering forged documents between December 1954 and February last year.

The documents purported to be imperial preference certificates issued by the Department of Commerce and Industry, relating to the shipment of goods for Mauritius. Mr Oswald Cheung, instructed by Mr Peter Mo, is representing Chan. Mr J. Bodilly, Crown Counsel, is prosecuting.

M. J. Patel, managing partner of the London-based Wah Shing Factory Co., gave evidence that he was convicted of uttering a forged document connected with the present case on January 14. He said he obtained material in Hong Kong and passed them on to the Wah Shing Factory Co.—the accused's factory—for processing, in accordance with samples given to him (Patel) by the consignees overseas.

Witness said he was not concerned with the methods of processing done by the Wah Shing Factory. He agreed with a question by Mr Cheung in cross-examination that he was concerned with the pattern to be printed on the material, as per the samples.

So long as the factory dyed the material according to the specifications in the sample, Patel went on, he was satisfied with their work. The specifications included the colours to be used on the material.

12,000 YARDS

He said he supplied the Wah Shing with altogether 12,000 yards of material for processing. Although he supplied them with the goods, he did not actually see the bolts of material in the packing cases when he sent them to the factory.

Mr Cheung referred witness to 3,000 yards of the material as covered by one of the purported imperial preference certificates, and asked what he meant when he said the goods were to be processed.

Patel said by that he meant starching and ironing. Asked if he had a written contract with the Wah Shing for this particular batch of the material, he said he could not remember, as the transaction took place over a year ago.

13 CENTS A YARD

Questioned further, witness said he paid the Wah Shing 13 cents per yard for processing that particular lot. He merely asked the factory to process it, but did not specify any methods.

He agreed with Mr Cheung that the contract called for the Wah Shing to do whatever work they thought fit to the material, to make it conform to the re-

ALLEGED MANSLAUGHTER

TRAIN FIREMAN TESTIFIES

Leung Wing-kit, a fireman on board the diesel electric train which was involved in a collision with an Army combat tank at Bird's Hill Crossing, New Territories on November 12 last year, testified this morning at the continued hearing of committal proceedings against Cpl Richard Moore, 22, on a charge of manslaughter before Mr T. Creeden in Kowloon Court.

The charge is in respect of the train guard, Yu Choi-po, who was killed in the collision.

Leung said that he was on board the train at the time of the accident. Somewhere along the straight stretch of the line, south of the level crossing, he heard a long blast followed by a series of short blasts of the train's whistle. At once, he looked to the front of the train on his side of the cab. He saw no obstruction, so he crossed to the driver's side. Through the driver's window he saw a tank which appeared to be stationary just short of the railway line. At that time the train was about 400 feet from the level crossing.

He said that when the driver released the whistle cord he took over the whistling. The driver then applied his hand to the emergency brake.

ACROSS THE LINE

Leung said that when he looked up again through the driver's window, he saw that the tank was already half its length across the line. At that time the train was 200 feet from the crossing. Its speed was 45 miles per hour. He became aware of the speed when he looked at the speedometer above the driver.

Seconds later the crash took place, Leung said.

Cross-examined by Mr A.S.C. Comber, representing Moore, Leung said that at 400 feet the

HE AIDED ILLEGAL ENTRY

A 35-year-old coxswain and master of a motor transport junk, Wong Tai, was fined a total of $3,250 for aiding and abetting illegal entry, carrying passengers without a permit and having secret compartments in a junk by Mr Hin-shing Lo at Central this morning.

Four women, who were found hiding in the secret compartment of the junk, were each fined $250 or six weeks for entering Hong Kong without a licence. They were all ordered to be expelled.

The four women were Choi Yuk-chun, 18, unemployed; Fung Wal-chun, 31, sampan woman; Hui Lai-lin, 30, unemployed; and Lam Pak-ngor, 21.

SECRETED AWAY

Det. Sub-Insps Kwong Kam-nin told the Court that at 5.30 a.m. on Monday a motor trading junk was intercepted by a Police launch on the east of Green Island.

When questioned first defendant said that he was not carrying passengers, but a search of the vessel revealed two very small secret compartments at the stern of the junk with the four women in one of the compartments.

Inspector Kwong said that the junk was only licensed to carry cargo. The women had paid $50 to $90 to be brought from Macao.

PLEADS GUILTY

The accused pleaded guilty to the offence which was committed in Causeway Bay, on October 18, last year. He had nothing to say in mitigation.

Mr Blair-Kerr, prosecuting, (assisted by Det. Insp. J. Howarth), said the Crown had regarded the case as a particularly serious one.

The accused had seized a six-chambered revolver from the constable, PC Ng Ping-kwong, and discharged all six rounds at him, wounding his chest and leg. After the shooting, several witnesses heard the accused clicking the revolver while the constable was lying on the ground severely wounded.

"No doubt this was a deliberate attempt at murder," Counsel remarked.

The constable was admitted to hospital. One of the two bullets had entered the chest and was extracted from the back. The other bullet shattered the leg bone and was extracted from the knee.

It was most fortunate that the constable did not die from the wounds, he added.

Remanded For Medical Report

Au Yeung Lau-mei, 34, a woman, was remanded for another week by Mr Justice J. R. Gregg, the Acting Chief Justice, at the Criminal Sessions, this morning, for the medical officer of Stanley Prison to testify as to her mental condition.

Au Yeung had pleaded guilty to a charge of attempted suicide at No. 721A, Nathan Road, third floor, on June 12, last year. Another charge of arson to which she had pleaded not guilty was dismissed when Mr W. A. Blair-Kerr, Senior Crown Counsel, offered no evidence on the charge.

Mr Blair-Kerr said it was a sad case and the Crown had reason to believe that the accused had been upset over the loss of some $2,000 shortly before the commission of the offence.
